Course Overview

Today's executive protection specialist must be equipped to deal with anything and at any time. Executive protection specialists constantly find themselves in risk prone situations and need to quickly assess threats focused towards high-profile public figures, celebrities, individuals and corporate facilities. Unlike your protectee, you cannot afford to be unaware of threats related to crime, terrorism, or civil unrest.

Today's executive protection specialist strives to balance the client's interests in living normal lives with substantially improving their overall safety and privacy. Utilizing today's technology you will learn how to design a protection program to tailor to the needs of the client more efficiently. Because each client's requirements are unique and special, flexibility is a key factor with any executive protection specialist as well as possessing the ability to exceed a client's safety challenges by providing a secure, organized, stress-free environment.

The purpose of this course is to engage attendees in awareness of the ever-growing threats surrounding our daily lives and how to implement and maintain control within an environment that is constantly in motion. Awareness is the key factor in determining and engaging any threat that is present. This course will cover the range of Executive Protection from the basic principals to advanced techniques. The course will be taught utilizing classroom lectures and practical field exercises. The training days will consist of eight hour days usually taught during the day, however some sessions will be in the evening hours. The course content will include the following:
